children is on the autism spectrum

SOURCE: CDC ADDM NETWORK

In a center or school your size, that's children you already know by name. It's also teachers who care about those children and were never trained for what behavioral needs ask of them.

When it gets to be too much, the usual ending is a hard one. The child is asked to leave. The parents lose their childcare, and often hours at work. The teacher carries it home. Nobody wanted any of it.

There's a different ending, and it starts with one more trained adult in the room.

This is not about labeling a child. Nothing happens without a parent's consent, and only a licensed clinician decides whether a child qualifies for services.

Whoever you are to the child, here's your next step.

One call reaches the same team. Tell us who you are and we'll take it from there.

Center directors & school leaders

Ask for a walkthrough. We come to your site, look at your rooms, answer your questions, and tell you plainly whether we're a fit. Under 30 minutes. No cost, no commitment.

Parents & caregivers

Ask about an evaluation. We see children from 18 months to 17 years. We'll explain what an evaluation involves and how insurance billing works before you decide anything.

Pediatricians & family doctors

Refer a family. Call or send them our way through the website. With the family's permission, we keep you informed as evaluation and care move forward.

Arlington Autism Center • Evaluations, therapy & parent support • Serving DFW families ages 18 months to 17 years

Care for everyone in the room.

The child who needs more. The teacher doing her best. The parent who can't leave work at noon. We're here for all three, inside your classroom.

ABA therapy, evaluations and family support, delivered where children already spend their day.

— HOW IT WORKS

Therapy that comes to the child, not the other way around.

We evaluate

With the parents' consent, our licensed clinicians meet the child at your center and determine whether ABA services are the right fit.

We come to you

A trained professional works with the child inside the classroom they already know, during the hours they're already there. Every day, not once a month.

Insurance pays

Services bill through the family's insurance. We handle 100% of the billing and talk with the family directly about coverage. Your center pays nothing.

ABA, in plain words. Applied Behavior Analysis teaches communication, everyday skills, and ways to cope, in small practical steps. Progress is measured as we go, so parents and teachers can see what's changing.

— WHO WE CARE FOR

Good for the child. Good for the teacher. Good for the family. Good for your center.

The child

Support in a familiar room, from a familiar face, on a routine they can count on. Children with behavioral needs don't progress in one-hour visits a month apart. Consistency is the treatment.

The teacher

A trained professional beside them, not a visitor with a clipboard. Someone to lean on when a morning goes sideways, and to learn from over time.

The parents

No mid-day clinic runs. No choosing between a job and a child's care. Parent support and regular updates, so home and classroom work from the same plan.

Your center or school

Nothing comes out of your budget. Families who would have been asked to leave stay enrolled, and your staff get relief that shows up every day.

The pediatrician

A referral you can make with confidence, and updates back to you as evaluation and care move forward, with the family's permission.

One team, one plan. Parents, teachers, and clinicians working from the same plan, with the child at the center of it. That's the whole idea.

— DAILY. NOT DRIVE-BY.

A steady presence everyone in the room can count on.

Visiting programs drop in for an hour and disappear for a month. Our team is there day after day, building trust with the child, the teachers, and the parents, so the plan holds on the hard days too.

Will this disrupt the other children?

No. The clinician works within your existing routine, not around it. The rest of the room keeps its day.

Who is actually in the room?

A trained professional from our team, working under licensed clinical oversight, present during normal hours.

What does the family pay?

Services bill through their insurance. We handle the billing and talk with the family about coverage directly.

We're here to help American daycare centers face a challenge that's growing every year, and no one should face it alone.
